First Resolution v. Seker (A-116-00)

Argued November 26, 2001 -- Decided May 7, 2002

VERNIERO, J., writing for a unanimous Court

The issue in this appeal is whether ordinary mail constitutes valid service when the certified mail is returned marked “unclaimed.”

This matter arises out of an application for wage garnishment following a default judgment. Plaintiff sent the required wage garnishment notice via regular and certified mail to defendant’s last known address. The regular mail was not returned and the certified mail was returned marked “unclaimed.” Following the expiration of the ten-day objection period provided under R. 4:59-1(d), plaintiff submitted a proposed order and certification of service indicating that the certified mail was returned “unclaimed.” Citing Morristown Memorial Hospital v. Tureo, 329 N.J. Super 154 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 165 N.J. 487 (2000), the trial court denied plaintiff’s application, holding that “unclaimed” is not the same as “refused or not accepted,” as required under R. 1:5-2.

Plaintiff appealed. The Appellate Division docketed the matter and granted amicus curiae status to the New Jersey Creditors Bar Association. Plaintiff then filed a motion for direct certification. The Supreme Court granted the motion together with the amicus curiae motion by Legal Services of New Jersey. The Court directly certified the appeal in order to resolve a conflict in the Appellate Division on the issue of service of process. In particular, the Court recognized that the Tureo decision was in conflict with the Appellate Division’s decision in Morristown Memorial Hospital v. Caldwell, 340 N.J. Super 562 (App. Div. 2001), which explicitly rejected the rule announced in Tureo.

HELD: Plaintiff’s proof of service certification was adequate under the Rules of Court. Morristown Memorial Hospital v. Tureo, 329 N.J. Super 154 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 165 N.J. 487 (2000), is overruled and the Civil Practice Committee is directed to make appropriate rule recommendations consistent with this opinion.

1. The language in R. 1:5-2 requiring that regular mail is sufficient where a party “refuses to claim or to accept delivery” of certified mail is slightly different from the language in R. 1:5-4(a), which states that regular mail is sufficient if the addressee “fails or refuses to claim or to accept delivery of certified or registered mail.” That difference has caused confusion, as evidenced by the decisions in Tureo and Caldwell. In Tureo, the Appellate Division adopted the reasoning of the trial court, which held that in order to demonstrate effective service by regular mail, a party must certify that the registered mail was either refused or not accepted. Caldwell, on the other hand, held that a judgment creditor need not recite the outcome of the certified mailing in the proof of service. Under Caldwell, proof of service is deemed sufficient if the creditor describes the date of mailing, the modes of service, and that the “mailing was to the last known address of the person served.” R. 1:5-3. (Pp. 5-10)
2. The additional proof of service requirement mandated by Tureo finds no foundation in the language of R. 1:5-3. The language in R. 1:5-2, however, suggests that additional details are required before ordinary mail is deemed valid. A review of the legislative history reveals that service by mail in post-judgment executions was meant to be less, not more, burdensome for parties. In addition, a number of amendments to service of process rules have consistently sought to simplify the process by eliminating unnecessary delays and expenses. Requiring a party to submit supplemental proofs in a post-judgment action appears to run counter to those objectives. (Pp. 10-13)
3. The rule drafters intended no difference between mail that is “unclaimed” and mail that a party “refuses to claim.” The Caldwell decision is consistent with the intent underlying the rules; common sense dictates that mail that is “refused or not accepted” may be marked “unclaimed.” (Pp. 13-14)
4. Service by mail is an “efficient and inexpensive way” to serve litigants and consistent with this State’s comprehensive due process protections provided to debtors. The holding in Caldwell is more in keeping with the policies that underlie the service rules than the construction advanced in Tureo. (Pp. 14-16)
5. The notice of wage execution provided in the Rules of Court at Appendix XI-I informs debtors that they have the right to contest a wage execution within ten days of receiving notice, but it does not, however, inform them that they may object after the wage execution has been ordered and that they are entitled to a hearing within seven days of the clerk’s receipt of the objection. Amicus Legal Services of New Jersey argued that this omission renders the notice constitutionally infirm. The Court finds that the form of notice as presently written satisfies due process, but that providing debtors with additional information will be salutary and would place little or no additional burden on creditors. Accordingly, the Civil Practice Committee is directed to review the notice requirements and recommend revised language to inform debtors of their continuing right to challenge wage executions. The revised language should be included only in those notices arising out of judgments entered after the date of this opinion. The Civil Practice Committee is directed to review other revisions to the rules suggested by amicus, including harmonizing Rules 1:5-2 and 1:5-4(a), and to recommend any additional changes to our service or notice rules consistent with this opinion. (Pp. 16-20)

The judgment of the trial court is REVERSED. Tureo is OVERRULED. The Civil Practice Committee is directed to review the issues identified above and to make appropriate recommendations as part of the regular rules cycle.

CHIEF JUSTICE PORITZ and JUSTICES STEIN, COLEMAN, LONG, LaVECCHIA, and ZAZZALI, join in Justice VERNIERO's opinion.

Supreme Court of New Jersey.

FIRST RESOLUTION INVESTMENT CORPORATION, Plaintiff-Appellant, v.
Bilal SEKER, Defendant.

Argued Nov. 26, 2001.

Decided May 8, 2002.

Judgment creditor applied for wage execution against judgment debtor. The Superior Court, Law Division, Passaic County, denied the application. Creditor appealed, and motion for direct certification was granted. The Supreme Court, Verniero, J., held that: (1) the proof of service certification did not need to state that the certified mailing of notice was either refused or not accepted, overruling Morristown Memorial Hospital v. Tureo, 329 N.J.Super. 154, 746 A.2d 1088; (2) proof of service certification complied with due process; and (3) due process did not entitle debtor to notice of right to object after the wage execution order and to have a hearing within seven days of the clerk's receipt of the objection.

Reversed.

*869 *505 Hillary Veldhuis, Mt. Laurel, argued the cause for appellant (Lyons, Doughty & Veldhuis, attorneys).

Lawrence J. McDermott, Jr., East Hanover, argued the cause for amicus curiae The New Jersey Creditors Bar Association (Pressler and Pressler, attorneys, Mr. McDermott, Sheldon H. Pressler and Steven P. McCabe, on the brief).

The opinion of the Court was delivered by

VERNIERO, J.

We directly certified this appeal, 169 N.J. 596, 782 A.2d 417 (2001), to resolve a conflict in the Appellate Division in respect of certain provisions governing service of process under our Rules of Court. Plaintiff sent a written notice of its application for wage execution to defendant by certified and regular mail. The post office returned the certified letter, marking it "unclaimed." The letter sent by regular mail was not returned. Plaintiff submitted the wage execution application to the trial court along with a certification of service specifying that plaintiff had sent the notice to defendant by regular and certified mail to his last known address, and that the certified letter was returned "unclaimed."

The trial court denied plaintiff's requested relief, concluding that plaintiff did not satisfy the requirements of *Morristown 506 Memorial Hospital v. Tureo, 329 N.J.Super. 154, 746 A.2d 1088 (App.Div.), certif. denied, 165 N.J. 487, 758 A.2d 647 (2000). The Tureo court held that a creditor seeking a post-judgment wage execution must indicate in a proof of service certification that the notice sent by certified mail to the debtor was refused or not accepted before ordinary mail constitutes valid service. Id. at 157, 746 A.2d 1088. Relying on Tureo, the trial court held that "even though regular mail was not returned, service was not effected. 'Unclaimed'*870 is not the same as 'Refused' or 'Not Accepted'."

A subsequent panel of the Appellate Division held that service by regular mail of a notice seeking to levy on a debtor's bank accounts was valid even without proof of the results of service by certified mail. Morristown Mem'l Hosp. v. Caldwell, 340 N.J.Super. 562, 564, 775 A.2d 34 (App.Div.2001). The Caldwell court explicitly rejected the rule announced in Tureo. Ibid.

We conclude that the Caldwell court's construction is more in keeping with the policies that underlie the service rules. Accordingly, we hold that plaintiff's proof of service certification was adequate under the rules. Apart from that issue, however, we further conclude that the content of notices served on debtors should contain information heretofore not required under Rule 4:59-1(d). The new information is intended to help debtors better understand their procedural rights. We direct the Civil Practice Committee to review that and other possible rule changes as described more fully below.

I.

The facts are straightforward. Defendant owed plaintiff approximately $3000 for an unpaid credit card balance in addition to annual interest as set forth in the parties' credit card agreement. On March 24, 2000, plaintiff sued defendant in the Special Civil Part to recover the monies owed. Plaintiff sent the summons and complaint to defendant by regular and certified mail. The certified mail return-receipt card was returned unsigned, and the reason for the non-delivery is unknown. (The notation of the post *507 office that usually describes the reason for non-delivery is illegible.)

Defendant did not answer, appear, or otherwise respond to the complaint. Consequently, a default judgment was entered against defendant in the amount of $5,206.30 in addition to costs and attorneys' fees. The record does not indicate how the original indebtedness grew to that amount.

Seeking to garnish defendant's wages to recover on the judgment, plaintiff sent a notice of application for wage execution by regular and certified mail to defendant's last known address. After three attempts to notify defendant of the certified mailing, the post office returned the certified mail envelope to plaintiff. A postal official checked off a box on a notation stamped on the outside of the envelope indicating that the letter was "unclaimed." The regular mail notice was not returned. Defendant filed no objection within the ten-day period provided under Rule 4:59-1(d). Thereafter, plaintiff forwarded a proposed order for wage execution to the trial court. Along with the proposed order, plaintiff provided a certification of service indicating that it had sent the notice to defendant by regular and certified mail to defendant's last known address, and that the certified mail had been returned "unclaimed."

The trial court denied plaintiff's application. Citing Tureo, supra, 329 N.J. Super. at 157, 746 A.2d 1088, the court stated in a brief, unreported decision: "Plaintiff does not show that the certified mail service was 'refused or not accepted'. Plaintiff shows that certified mail was 'unclaimed'. Therefore, even though regular mail was not returned, service was not effected. 'Unclaimed' is not the same as 'Refused' or 'Not Accepted'."

Plaintiff appealed the trial court's determination to the Appellate Division. After the Appellate Division docketed the case and granted amicus curiae status to the New Jersey Creditors Bar Association (Bar Association), we granted plaintiff's motion for direct certification. We also granted amicus curiae status to Legal Services of New Jersey (Legal Services), which participated 508 on behalf of defendant. *871 Defendant himself has not appeared at any stage of these proceedings.

II. A.

[1] We begin our analysis by setting forth the relevant Rules of Court that are at the heart of the conflict between Tureo and Caldwell. Rule 4:59-1(d) governs the procedure for enforcing judgments through wage executions. It states, in part, that

[t]he notice of wage execution shall be served on the judgment debtor in accordance with R. 1:5-2. A copy of the notice of application for wage execution, together with proof of service in accordance with R. 1:5-3, shall be filed with the clerk at the time the form of order for wage execution is submitted.

[R. 4:59-1(d) (emphasis added).]

Rule 1:5-2 states, in part, that service on a party shall be made ... by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, to the party's last known address; or if the party refuses to claim or to accept delivery, by ordinary mail to the last known address; ... Where mailed service is made upon a party, the modes of service may be made simultaneously.

[(Emphasis added).]

Rule 1:5-3 describes the required proof of service and provides, in part, that [i]f service has been made by mail the [proof of service] certification shall state that the mailing was to the last known address of the person served Where service has been made by registered or certified mail, filing of the return receipt card with the court shall not be required.

[(Emphasis added).]

As noted, the above procedures govern a party's enforcement of judgments through wage executions. A separate rule, Rule 1:5-4(a), describes when service by mail is complete irrespective of whether a party is seeking to enforce a judgment. That rule states, in part:

Where under any rule, provision is made for service by certified or registered mail, service may also be made by ordinary mail simultaneously or thereafter. If the addressee fails or refuses to claim or to accept delivery of certified or registered mail, the ordinary mailing shall be deemed to constitute service.

[R. 1:5-4(a) (emphasis added).]

509 The comment to Rule 1:5-4(a) states that "this rule ... merely restate[s] the practice already prescribed by R. 1:5-2 for service of papers after process." Pressler, Current N.J. Court Rules, comment 1 on R. 1:5-4 (2002). Notably, the pertinent language in Rule 1:5-2 ("refuses to claim") is slightly different from the language in Rule 1:5-4(a) ("fails or refuses to claim"). That difference apparently has caused some confusion as evidenced by the conflicting Appellate Division decisions.

Against that backdrop, we now turn to those conflicting decisions. The creditor in Tureo filed a notice of motion for wage execution against the debtor to collect a default judgment in the amount of $397.50 plus interest. Tureo, supra, 329 N.J. Super. at 155, 746 A.2d 1088. The creditor certified in its proof of service that it had sent the motion to the debtor's last known address by regular and certified mail. Ibid. The trial court denied the motion, and the Appellate Division affirmed that denial, adopting the trial court's opinion in its entirety. Id. at 156-57, 746 A.2d 1088.

In that opinion, the trial court noted that the simultaneous mailing provision in Rule 1:5-2 does not relieve a creditor from having to certify that a debtor "refused to claim or to accept" the certified mail before service by ordinary mail is deemed permissible. Id. at 156, 746 A.2d 1088. In *872 addition, the trial court stated that the content of the proof of service certification is not limited to the language of Rule 1:5-3 ("the mailing was to the last known address of the person served"), because the purpose of that rule is to demonstrate that service has been effected, not merely attempted. Id. at 157, 746 A.2d 1088. The trial court, therefore, concluded that service by ordinary mail is effective to give notice of an application to the court for a wage execution only when the certified or registered mail has been refused or not accepted. Thus, in order to demonstrate effective, timely service, the proof filed with the court must recite either that the certified or registered mail was accepted and the date of acceptance or must recite that the certified or registered mail was either refused or not accepted and set forth the date of ordinary mail service.

[Ibid. (emphasis added).]

510 In contrast, the Caldwell plaintiff filed a post-judgment motion for the turnover of funds levied against the defendant under Rule 4:59- 1(g). Caldwell, supra, 340 N.J.Super. at 565, 775 A.2d 34. The motion was served by certified mail and regular mail to the defendant's last known address, and the plaintiff set forth those details in its proof of service. Ibid. The trial court denied the plaintiff's motion, noting that "[t]here is no certification as to Results of Service." Id. at 565-66, 775 A.2d 34. The Appellate Division reversed and remanded for the entry of the turnover order. Id. at 573, 775 A.2d 34.

The Caldwell panel determined that when "service of the turnover motion has been made simultaneously by certified and ordinary mail at the debtor[s] last known address, the [creditor's] application should be granted" so long as either mailing was not returned for the reasons stated in Rule 6:2- 3(d)(4). Id. at 564, 775 A.2d 34. That rule governs service of process in the Special Civil Part, stating, in relevant part, that simultaneous mailing of certified and regular mail "shall constitute effective service unless the mail is returned to the court by the postal service marked 'moved, unable to forward,' 'addressee not known,' 'no such number/street,' 'insufficient address,' ... or the court has other reason to believe that service was not effected." R. 6:2-3(d)(4).

In reaching that conclusion, the Appellate Division explicitly disagreed with Tureo. Caldwell, supra, 340 N.J.Super. at 564, 775 A.2d 34. The panel stated that Tureo's requirement of supplemental proof that a certified mailing was refused or not accepted before granting an application for post-judgment execution "unnecessarily delayed post-judgment collection proceedings by imposing a requirement not warranted by the rules or due process." Ibid. The Caldwell court noted that requiring such supplemental proof runs contrary to the Rule 1:6-3(c) presumption that service by ordinary mail is completed on the third business day after mailing. Id. at 568, 775 A.2d 34. The court further observed that the Tureo opinion "is spurring anomalous results," and that the application of Tureo has allowed trial courts 511 to place "impossible hurdle[s]" in the path of post-judgment creditors. Id. at 570, 775 A.2d 34.

In sum, Tureo requires that judgment creditors seeking a post-judgment wage garnishment must indicate, in the proof of service certification, that the certified mailing of notice sent to the debtor was either refused or not accepted before ordinary mail can be deemed to constitute valid service. In contrast, under Caldwell, a judgment creditor need not recite the outcome of the certified mailing in the proof of service. Rather, a proof of service is sufficient if the creditor describes the date of mailing, the modes of service, and that *873 the "mailing was to the last known address of the person served." R. 1:5-3.

B.

[2][3][4] " 'As a general rule of statutory construction, we look first to the language of the statute. If the statute is clear and unambiguous on its face and admits of only one interpretation, we need delve no deeper than the act's literal terms to divine the Legislature's intent.' " State v. Thomas, 166 N.J. 560, 567, 767 A.2d 459 (2001) (quoting State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220, 226, 445 A.2d 399 (1982)). "The same principles of statutory construction apply to rule construction." State v. Vigilante, 194 N.J. Super. 560, 563, 477 A.2d 429 (1983); see also Douglas v. Harris, 35 N.J. 270, 278, 173 A.2d 1 (1961) (applying canons of construction in interpreting court rule).

Arguably, the language of Rule 1:5-3 is clear and unambiguous. The rule requires that the proof of service indicate that a mailing was sent to a party's last known address and nothing more. That, of course, does not preclude a party from including additional details in respect of the outcome of a certified mailing, but the rule does not require such information. Simply, the additional proof of service requirement mandated by Tureo finds no foundation in the language of Rule 1:5-3.

512 [5] Rule 1:5-3, however, cannot be viewed in a vacuum. Reading that rule in conjunction with Rule 1:5-2 (the rule pertaining to manner of service), we observe a possible ambiguity in that Rule 1:5-2 refers to a party who "refuses to claim or to accept delivery [of the certified mail.]" That language suggests that a judgment creditor must describe those details before service by ordinary mail is deemed valid. If a statute or rule is ambiguous, courts may ascertain the intent of the drafters by looking to extrinsic sources such as the statute's or rule's underlying purpose and history. Clymer v. Summit Bancorp., 171 N.J. 57, 66, 792 A.2d 396 (2002) (citing Aponte-Correa v. Allstate Ins. Co., 162 N.J. 318, 323, 744 A.2d 175 (2000)).

The history of Rule 1:5-3 suggests that its drafters intended to make service by mail in post-judgment executions less, not more, burdensome for parties. For example, in September 1990, an amendment to the rule eliminated the requirement that a return-receipt card be filed along with the proof of service "in view of substantial post office delays." Pressler, supra, comment on R. 1:5-3. To protect a defendant's interests in view of that amendment, the drafters added the requirement that the proof of service attest to the fact that the mailing was sent to the party's last known address. Ibid.

In addition, both Rule 1:5-2 and Rule 1:5-4(a) (the rule describing when service is complete) were amended in 1981 and 1986 respectively to allow ordinary mail service to be made simultaneously with certified mail service. Pressler, supra, comment on R. 1:5-2, comment 1 on R. 1:5-4. Those revisions were made "to expedite service by relieving the party making service of having to wait until the registered or certified mail is refused or unclaimed before making ordinary mail service." Id. at comment 1 on R. 1:5-4 (emphasis added).

Further, "[t]he general intent of [a] statute [or rule] controls the interpretation of its component parts." Nat'l Waste Recycling, Inc. v. Middlesex County Improvement Auth., 150 N.J. 209, 223, 695 A.2d 1381 (1997) (citing State v. Szemple, 135 N.J. 406, 422, 513 640 A.2d 817 (1994)). Along those lines, the rules themselves direct that they are to "be construed to secure a just determination, simplicity in procedure, fairness in administration and the elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay." R. 1:1-2.

Requiring a party to submit supplemental proof in a post- *874 judgment action appears to run counter to those objectives, especially the goal of eliminating unjustifiable expense and undue delay in court proceedings.

C.

[6] We recognize the literal difference between "unclaimed" and "refused or not accepted." We nonetheless agree with the Caldwell court that in respect of the latter phrase, "common sense dictates that this [phrase] includes postal service notations indicating that certified mail service 'failed' such as 'unclaimed' or 'not claimed.'" Caldwell, supra, 340 N.J.Super. at 570 n. 2, 775 A.2d 34. The comments to Rule 1:5-2 and Rule 1:5-4(a), to the extent they reveal "legislative" intent, indicate that the rule drafters intended no distinction between mail that is "unclaimed" and mail that a party "refuses to claim." See Pressler, supra, comment on R. 1:5-2, comment 1 on R. 1:5-4. Although a literal distinction between the two phrases may suggest otherwise, we are satisfied that Caldwell interpretation is consonant with the intent underlying the rules. See Town of Morristown v. Woman's Club of Morristown, 124 N.J. 605, 610, 592 A.2d 216 (1991) (observing that plain language of statute [or rule] should be given effect unless there is "specific indication of legislative intent to the contrary").

D.

[7][8] Due process is implicated in this case because a wage garnishment affects defendant's interest by depriving him of the continued use of some portion of his property. See Township of Montville v. Block 69, Lot 10, 74 N.J. 1, 8, 376 A.2d 909 (1977) (holding that deprivation of property must conform to due process principles). In New Jersey, as elsewhere, "[t]he essential components *514 of due process are notice and an opportunity to be heard." Mettinger v. Globe Slicing Mach. Co., 153 N.J. 371, 389, 709 A.2d 779 (1998) (citing Mullane v. Cent. Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 313, 70 S.Ct. 652, 656-57, 94 L. Ed. 865, 873 (1950)).

As noted by amicus Bar Association, our court rules provide debtors with numerous protections. For example, debtors are accorded notice before their wages are garnished, are notified of the procedure by which to challenge the garnishment within ten days of receiving that notice, are given the opportunity to object after the court orders the garnishment, and are entitled to a hearing within seven days of that objection. R. 4:59-1(d). Consistent with Caldwell, those protections are at least as comprehensive, if not more so, than those required by other jurisdictions. See, e.g., McCahey v. L.P. Investors, 774 F.2d 543, 549 (2d Cir.1985) (finding due process satisfied when judgment debtors are notified about garnishment and available exemptions after property is seized, and when they have opportunity to challenge seizure promptly); Brown v. Liberty Loan Corp., 539 F.2d 1355, 1368 (5th Cir.1976) (holding that due process does not require notice or hearing before writ of garnishment issues).

[9] Similarly, we agree with those courts that have observed that service by mail is an "efficient and inexpensive way" to serve litigants. Mullane, supra, 339 U.S. at 319, 70 S.Ct. at 660, 94 L. Ed. at 876. In Feuchtbaum v. Constantini, 59 N.J. 167, 181, 280 A.2d 161 (1971), this Court held that due process is satisfied when a defendant, who cannot be found for personal service but is a resident of the State at the time of the actionable event, is served by ordinary mail at his or her last known address. In short, we find nothing in the procedure followed by plaintiff, or in the language of the rules as interpreted by Caldwell, that violates the basic requirements of due process.

We conclude that the Caldwell court's construction is more in keeping with the *875 policies that underlie the service rules than the construction advanced in Tureo. Accordingly, we find plaintiff's proof of service certification to be adequate under the rules.

515 III.

A.

[10] Plaintiff's notice of wage execution served on defendant tracked the language of the form of notice provided in the Rules of Court at Appendix XI-I. That notice informs debtors that they have the right to contest a wage execution within ten days of receiving notice. It does not, however, inform debtors that they may object after the wage execution has been ordered and that they are entitled to a hearing within seven days of the clerk's receipt of the objection. R. 4:59-1(d).

[11] Legal Services, as amicus, argues that that omission renders the notice constitutionally infirm. Briefly stated, the requirements of due process are met in this context so long as the notice is "reasonably calculated" to give parties the "opportunity to present their objections." Mullane, supra, 339 U.S. at 314, 70 S.Ct. at 657, 94 L. Ed. at 873. Information regarding the ten-day objection period already informs debtors of their right to challenge the wage execution. Due process is thus satisfied without the inclusion of the additional information sought by amicus.

That said, we find merit in Legal Services' position, not because of a constitutional mandate, but as a matter of fairness and sound public policy. See Lacey Mun. Utils. Auth. v. New Jersey Dep't of Env'tl. Prot., 162 N.J. 30, 40, 738 A.2d 955 (1999) (observing that agencies should be guided by "basic fairness in determining how best to effectuate public policy"); In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 579, 449 A.2d 7 (1982) (remanding license revocation case for hearing before licensing agency not due to constitutional requirements, but "as a matter of simple fairness"); Avant v. Clifford, 67 N.J. 496, 526-27, 341 A.2d 629 (1975) (concluding that although membership of prison board satisfied due process requirements, "rightness and fairness" required certain modifications).

We are persuaded that debtors will benefit from the added knowledge that they may object after a wage execution has been 516 issued. We also find little or no burden on judgment creditors in providing that additional information. In this narrow setting, we do not hesitate to exceed the minimum requirements of due process because to do so places little or no additional burden on creditors.

[12] Accordingly, we direct the Civil Practice Committee to review the notice requirements under Rule 4:59-1(d) as reflected in the form at Appendix XI-I of the Rules of Court, and to recommend revised language to inform debtors of their continuing right to challenge wage executions. Until such language is adopted, we suggest that judgment creditors include in their notices a statement that clearly and unambiguously conveys the rights of debtors in that regard. See Cnty. Realty Mgmt. v. Harris, 155 N.J. 212, 240, 714 A.2d 282 (1998) (directing Special Civil Part Practice Committee to prepare changes to rules involving consent judgments to avoid unfair treatment of pro se tenants).

Our disposition raises the question whether we should require the revised notice in the present case or in future cases only. See State v. Purnell, 161 N.J. 44, 53-59, 735 A.2d 513 (1999) (discussing pertinent factors to consider when undertaking retroactivity analysis). Here, the revised language is not required either by the current text of the rules or by due process. Moreover, the notice sent to defendant informed him of his right to contest the wage execution within ten days of receiving that notice, plaintiff's proof of *876 service certification was adequate under existing rules, and defendant has not objected at any stage of these proceedings.

Under those circumstances, plaintiff should not be required to recommence a process of collecting on its uncontested judgment that already has taken over two years to complete. "The notion of rerunning the process at this late juncture has an air of futility to it." Golden v. County of Union, 163 N.J. 420, 435, 749 A.2d 842 (2000). We are thus satisfied that the revised language should be included only in those notices arising out of judgments entered after the date of this opinion.

Lastly, although we have resolved the issues most pertinent to this appeal, we acknowledge that Legal Services has brought to our attention other provisions of our court rules that may require further consideration. First, Rule 6:2- 3 contains postal designations, such as "moved, unable to forward," that may be inconsistent with existing post office practices, and, therefore, that rule should be revised to ensure that it contains more appropriate language. Second, the difference in language between Rule 1:5-2 ("refuses to claim") and Rule 1:5-4(a) ("fails or refuses to claim") should be harmonized to avoid further confusion. Third, a requirement that a creditor must include information in respect of how it obtained a debtor's "last known address" in the proof of service also should be carefully considered because post-judgment service of process relies so heavily on the accuracy of that address.

The Civil Practice Committee is the appropriate entity to evaluate those proposals. We thus direct that Committee to review the revisions suggested by amicus and to recommend any additional changes to our service or notice rules consistent with the principles enunciated in this opinion. The Civil Practice Committee should seek input from the Special Civil Part Practice Committee to the extent that the proposals implicate rules within the purview of that latter committee.

IV.

The judgment of the trial court is reversed. Tureo is overruled. The Civil Practice Committee is directed to review the issues identified above and to make appropriate recommendations as part of the regular rules cycle.

For reversal--Chief Justice PORITZ and Justices STEIN, COLEMAN, LONG, VERNIERO, LaVECCHIA, and ZAZZALI--7.

Opposed--None.
